

Bottom-up Approach of Economic Integration in Northeast Asia (Summary)

NINJIN Bataa

Researcher, Mongolian Institute of Northeast Asian Security and Strategy (MINASS)

Economic integration is one of the crucial cogs in international relations. Policy pathways are typically shaped by the centralized power through state agencies. And the Northeast Asian region is no exception. Therefore, the bottom-up approach makes real the possibility for provinces of different countries to engage in economic integration without the central power's navigation.
